Responding to Fuel Cost Pressures at Budget 2026 – Fire and Emergency New Zealand

Dear Brooke

As you are aware, the conflict in the Middle East and resultant disruption to shipping through the Strait of Hormuz has led to significant increases in the price of fuel and resulted in considerable fuel supply-chain constraints.

I understand this has resulted in increased cost pressures on Fire and Emergency New Zealand which requires fuel to undertake their day-to-day operations. In the first instance, I expect Ministers to consider what actions could be taken by their agency, or funded services, to reduce fuel demand in a sensible manner that ensures the maintenance of core service delivery.

I remain committed to fiscal responsibility and delivering on our fiscal strategy, particularly to ensure we have resilience in the face of future shocks. However, I also recognise the impact fuel prices are having on your agency's ability to deliver its core services.

I understand that you are currently working through a range of scenarios and options to minimise usage and/or manage cost pressures. However, given the non-discretionary nature of the role of Fire and Emergency New Zealand, I invite you to submit an initiative limited to the following areas only, and I expect there to be a focus on maintaining the delivery of public services:

- Funding for critical fuel use (either directly by the agency or through essential contracted services)
- Energy security measures and interventions to support the resilience of our public services and that reduce future cost pressures. This may include accelerating existing plans to actively transition to alternative energy sources

This invitation is not a guarantee of funding, and I expect you, in your submission, to provide an overview of a range of scenarios and options to minimise fuel usage and reprioritisation to meet these additional costs.

You are not invited to submit:

- Additional new spending initiatives (which were not previously invited)
- Funding for other inflationary cost pressures as a result of the fuel situation.

Next Steps

Please email my office by 5pm, Tuesday 7 April outlining any initiatives you are submitting. I ask that your agency ensures that these initiatives are submitted into CFISnet by the same date. The Treasury will be in touch with your agency on what the limited information requirements for these initiatives are. The Treasury will also provide a scenario to be used when calculating direct fuel price related cost pressures.

The Ministerial Oversight Group on the Economic Response Plan to the Middle East conflict has made decisions on the framework for the National Fuel Plan. I will continue to engage with you as and when the situation changes if further measures are required to support the delivery of critical public services.

Thank you for your support as we adapt Budget 2026 to respond to the current global environment

Yours sincerely,

Hon Nicola Willis
Minister of Finance
